

In-Class Essay Planner
ENG 101: Dr. Halbert

For your in-class essay, you must create a 5”x 8” exam card with an outline of your essay preplanned. You may not write out the whole essay, but you can make as detailed an outline of incomplete sentences/phrase as you can fit in the space. As a reminder, here is the question you are answering:

Much like Lubrano defines "straddlers" and Lowen defines the processes of "herofication," coin a term for a group or process related to an educational experience you personally observed during your schooling. You may commandeer a word from existing vocabulary and craft a new, localized meaning relevant to the group or process you are describing, or you may create a new word entirely. Your response should take the form of a five-to-seven paragraph essay with an introduction and conclusion.

To answer this question, plan out your essay by completing these questions and then use the answers to write your outline:

1. What is the term you are coining/creating?
2. Write out a definition of the term:
3. What impact does this group/experience have on the people of your school? In other words, why does this group matter and how did it affect others?
4. Give three specific examples of this term in action.
